

ALEX GOLDBERG

Alex is an associate attorney at Nochumson P.C., where he focuses his practice on land use and zoning as well as real estate taxation matters. Known for his precision, adaptability, and collaborative style, Alex works closely with developers, architects, homeowners, and governmental agencies to secure zoning relief, navigate licensing and permitting, and pursue tax abatements and assessment appeals. He also advises clients on condominium and planned community conversions, helping them structure and execute complex real estate projects with confidence.

Alex's clients value his creative problem-solving, attention to detail, and ability to think on his feet—especially when navigating the intricate regulatory and real estate tax landscape in Philadelphia and beyond.

He is an active member of the legal community, serving on the Executive Committee of the Real Property Section of the Philadelphia Bar Association, where he contributes to thought leadership and programming that shapes the region's real estate legal practice.

Alex's legal foundation is built on a wide range of experiences. During law school, he worked with in-house counsel at a major hospital network, served as a judicial intern at the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, and clerked at firms specializing in land use and zoning law—giving him a well-rounded perspective on how legal decisions impact clients from all angles.

While earning his J.D. at Drexel University's Thomas R. Kline School of Law, Alex served as a lead editor of the Drexel Law Review and was a member of the Moot Court Board, sharpening his skills in legal writing and oral advocacy.

After law school, Alex joined a mid-sized Center City law firm, where he handled a broad range of real estate matters, including land use, zoning, and real estate tax assessment appeals, before bringing his talents to Nochumson P.C.

In addition to his J.D. degree, Alex also holds a B.S. degree in Public Policy Administration from James Madison University. He is admitted to practice law in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.